

What Trauma Taught Me About Resilience

Charles is no stranger to trauma. He openly shares his personal experiences of growing up with a father in prison, a mother addicted to drugs and the loss of many family and friends.

Charles believes that resilience is one of the most important traits to have and that everyone has it, we just need to learn how to access it.

